

Free Dating Websites – Why They Are Expensive

I've used both free and paid dating websites and the conclusion I've reached is that free dating websites are extremely expensive.

There are different levels of "free". Some dating websites are completely free, with no form of payment. Others let you join for free and give you the option to pay a fee, for which you'll receive better service, more facilities and more benefits. Lastly, there are dating websites which require a payment to join.

So, why do I say that free dating websites are extremely expensive? Check out my reasons below.

- All sorts of garbage are attracted to free sites. Scammers, evil people, those that have been banned from quality dating websites and people with plenty of time just to play games, some of which make it a full-time occupation.
- Free dating websites don't have the staff to monitor for possible scams, which gives the scammers ample opportunity to run their scams.
- All dating websites need to make money to exist. The only way the completely free dating websites can make money is from ads they display. This can make them more interested in people clicking on the ads rather than providing facilities for you to easily find other people or be found by other people.
- Some free websites use the unscrupulous practice of selling your email address to mass-mailing companies, putting you in danger of being relentlessly hit by numerous unsolicited or commercial emails.
- Customer support is non-existent or very scrappy.
- Bogus or misleading profiles are annoying and time wasting when you discover that someone has deceived you.
- Making a payment shows that someone has invested in the procedure, so they are unlikely to play games and they'll have serious intentions.
- Quality people are inclined to avoid free dating websites due to the reasons given above. They want results and don't want to waste time. So, your chances of meeting someone worthy of your attention on a free dating website are very slim.

So, I've reached the conclusion that free dating websites are expensive in time and effort. Paying a subscription gives me results without the annoyance and frustration I'd get on a free dating website.

I have one last very important point. The hottest women don't want to waste time chatting to losers and no-hopers. They are VERY selective. They check out profiles BEFORE they chat with men. So, be very careful about which online dating sites you use. You'll probably find that the "free" dating websites don't have any way to allow you to place your profile ABOVE other profiles. This is an option available in most dating websites where you pay a membership fee. Having your profile ABOVE non-paying members is VITAL to attract the hottest women. If you chat with women that haven't checked your profile, it probably means that they will chat with ANYONE. What does that mean? It means that they aren't selective and that they probably just want to USE men to get what they want.

You'll waste more money overall on women that aren't hot if you don't have your profile positioned above non-paying members. Don't play around with your future happiness and don't miss out on the hottest, sincere women. Pay the fee!
